ABOUT THE MEDICAL PROGRAM STRUCTURE IN GERMANY.

The process of seeking the admission to the medical university of Germany is extremely competitive. Around 10,000 new students start medical education each year as universities have a quota. The medical seats in Germany are allotted to the merit students with the highest Abitur grades from the Stiftung für Hochschulzulassung for German citizens. However, for international students, Germany has reserved 10% of the seats to study MBBS / MD in Germany. This makes it a very attractive destination. However, the student quality needs to be assessed before placing the student for MBBS in Germany.

Once accepted, medical training covers both pre-clinical studies and practical application. The medical study in Germany is of six years. A minimum of 12 semesters with each term lasting about 6 months. First 2 years are dedicated to Basic Science. It is followed by 3 years of Clinical Science. These 3 years of clinical science consists of:

- 12 Months (48 weeks) of practical training & first aid training (Named as Practical Year).
- 3 months of nursing experience.
- 4 months of clinical elective
- Final 1 Clinical year.

EXAMINATION SYSTEM FOR MBBS / MD IN GERMANY.

The state exam, the Approbationsordnung für Ärzte (Regulation of the Licensing of Doctors or AppOÄ), takes place in three stages:

M1: The students appear for medical examination namely "Physicum". This needs to be given after two years of study in the field of medicine in Germany. It is based on non-clinical subjects such as anatomy, biochemistry, and physiology and is a written and oral-practical. It matches with the first 18 months of MBBS in India course. The subjects are taught in the German language. Hence it is important to learn the German language with proficiency level matching with a German citizen before you are inducted into the course.

M2: The second stage takes place after five years of study and successful completion of the first exam. It is a written case-related exam.

M3: The third stage takes place one year after completion of the second stage following a total of six years of study in the field of medicine. It is an oral/practical examination.

Germany's excellent healthcare system is reliant on excellent doctors. The country develops many health industry professionals itself, but there are opportunities for Indian students to become a doctor in Germany. So just reserve the seat in an MCI approved MBBS abroad university as per your budget and relax!

DURATION TO COMPLETE MBBS IN GERMANY.

The total duration to complete the MBBS / MD in Germany at a good German medical school is 7.5 Years. There are some other cheap medical schools in Germany which may or not follow the same system. This seems to be quite high as compared to other programs in East European countries such as MBBS in Russia. However, the time consumed is almost the same. When Indian students pursue medicine program in Russia or Georgia, they spend 6 years in Russia. On returning to India, the students have to appear for MCI screening test. On clearance of the same, the Indian students need to go through an additional 1 year of internship making it 7.5 years of MBBS in abroad. So do not worry about the duration part. German medical schools ranking is quite high. However, what you need to be worried about is the MCI approval for many of the German medical institutes. Requirements to study medicine in Germany is minimal. They need passionate, dedicated and worthy students. PG in Germany after MBBS is the new trend.
